Dear SPGians,

Society of Petroleum Geophysicists (SPG), India is publishing its in-house magazine GEOHORIZONS to share the knowledge among the fellow geoscientists in the forms of new papers from authors and selected papers from the concluded conference of SPG India for the benefit of SPGians who could not make it to attend the conference.

In all there are five papers being published in this journal with different topics and the content of which is explained by the Editor in detail. I am sure these will help in expanding the learning curve and thereby the knowledge bar.

This year Society of Petroleum Geophysicists (SPG), India, is organizing its 12th Biennial International Conference & Exposition at Jaipur, India during November 17-19, 2017. The theme “Energy Through Synergy” aims to address the ever increasing challenges of Energy Security. New technologies have changed the way we explore, produce and exploit resources over the years by way of improved understanding and quality of information about subsurface. Advances in technology have helped in realising potential of unconventional resources. Thus the impact of technological advances has been significant and critical towards energy security. I take this opportunity to invite all of you to “Jaipur-2017” and be a part of SPG, India's endeavour for technological solutions in reducing uncertainties of E&P industry.

Regional chapters playing an important role in arranging seminars, workshops, field trips etc. and some are also covered in the news items. SPG is looking forward to have such seminars, workshops and field trips by all the regional and student chapters for its members.

In this context, Society of Petroleum Geophysicists (SPG), India, since its inception, has been playing a very significant role in bringing together the eminent geoscientists, technocrats, intellectuals, academicians, students and service providers at a common platform for exchange of ideas, sharing of experiences and showcasing of technical skills to the global participants. I request cooperation and contribution from all of you in the days to come.
