

From the Editor's Desk

This is the first GEOHORIZONS issue of the year 2015 and is the first by the new team. The team has to work hard to meet the preset goals to release the issue in the first week of January itself and had to be on toes. It makes me happy to note that esteemed members of SPG could respond to the call given for papers and have shown zeal and enthusiasm by participating in the task by sending quality papers within the short notice. I am thankful to all the reviewers who have come forward and completed the review in time to enable us to meet the goal.

This time you may appreciate the change that we kept a brief profile of author with photo at the end of the paper and also each paper has been owned by SPG by keeping the SPG logo at the top left end of the paper. As many authors requested me for guidelines if any, I requested our team to prepare general guidelines and the same are added to the Editorial policy page. This may help authors and our team to move the paper from beginning stage to publishing stage at a faster rate.

All papers are thoroughly seen by me and my team for possible typographic errors etc., and may please bear with us if some left out in this issue as the task is herculean and time is short. I will assure you that the issues to come will be more interesting and will surely be appreciated by you all.

I am not repeating the paper wise description as the same has already been discussed by the Chief Advisor. I take this opportunity on behalf of Editorial team which would like to wish a very happy new year to all SPG members and their families.
